

RESERVOIR FLOODING

Reservoir flooding is very unlikely to happen, but in the rare chance that it does it may happen with little or no warning and can cause major damage.

Some of the causes are prolonged periods of heavy rainfall, water flowing over the top of the dam and a leak or crack in the dam or embankment structure.